FORTUNE TELLING 101: SYMBOLS GLOSSARY

Introduction: What is Turkish Coffee?

Turkish coffee is more than just a drink; it's a centuries-old ritual that symbolises hospitality, respect, and connection. Brewed from finely ground Arabica beans and served unfiltered, this small yet strong cup of coffee carries a legacy rooted in Ottoman culture. Its velvety foam, intense flavour, and thick sediment at the bottom make it unlike any other coffee in the world.

Served with a glass of water and a piece of Turkish Delight, Turkish coffee invites slow sips and warm conversation. It is recognised by UNESCO as an Intangible Cultural Heritage of Humanity for good reason —the tradition continues to bind generations together across time.

A Cultural Ritual: Turkish Coffee in Social Life

Turkish coffee has been part of daily life since the 16th century. In the Ottoman Empire, it formed the heart of social gatherings in "kahvehane" (coffeehouses), where people discussed politics, literature, and philosophy. These venues became known as the "schools of the wise."

Even today, Turkish coffee is a cornerstone of social interaction. Whether served to guests at home or enjoyed with friends at a modern cafe, it conveys a message of hospitality and community. It's a tradition still practised in engagement ceremonies, where the bride-to-be offers coffee—sometimes playfully with salt instead of sugar—to the groom's family.

The Story Behind "The Forty Years Coffee"

The name "The Forty Years Coffee" comes from a Turkish saying: "Bir fincan kahvenin kırk yıl hatırı vardır" — "A cup of coffee has a memory of forty years."

This proverb celebrates the enduring value of kindness, friendship, and shared experience. It's the very inspiration behind our workshops. At "The Forty Years Coffee," we share more than a cup; we share stories, heritage, and the art of meaningful pause. Rooted in Turkish tradition and brought to life in Melbourne, our mission is to create memorable moments through the cultural richness of Turkish coffee.
